JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 29.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation's gigantic seven-mile long Cambria works were completely crippled early today when two mysterious dynamiting wrecked the two main water supply lines and caused immediate cessation of all operations.

All heat was ordered turned off in the mills because of the imminent danger of explosions due to lack of water.

"I told President Roosevelt this was what was going to happen," declared Mayor Daniel J. Shields, vigorous opponent of the CIO strike who had made several telegraphic appeals to the president for intervention.

Asked whether he thought CIO strikers were responsible, James Mark, veteran union leader directing the strike said:

"I hope not."

PA NEWC OBSERVES

Without a doubt, the South Side branch of the New Castle Free Public Library boasts one of the most attractive window displays in the city. The window has been cleverly arranged to fit the time of year. A miniature highway shows an automobile and trailer while another corner is occupied by a small train. Above, an airplane is seen soaring in the clouds. The display is causing considerable attention.

Pa Newc noticed that the elm tree at Sylvan Heights course have become infested with huge blue caterpillars, unlike any he had seen before. They were beginning to make short work of eating off the leaves when Greenskeeper John Reed put a stop to it.

There seems to be about as many firecrackers shot off in the city this year as there ever were before the city ordinance was passed forbidding the sale of the crackers in the city. Sunday is no exception, either, Pa Newc noted. Sunday evening, the reports of the fire crackers could be heard echoing throughout the city.

New Castle and Lawrence county will probably send a large delegation to Pymatuning lake on Thursday, when the fishing season in the Pymatuning waters will be opened for the first time. Some ceremonies will attend the opening. Hundreds of fishermen are expected to be present.

Work is nearing completion on the paving of Sumner avenue, on the North Hill. The work was believed about completed, but raising of the manhole covers is now under way, and the completion of the improvement is delayed.

Wheeler Challenges Administration On Court Compromise

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
(International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The administration was challenged by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D) of Montana, today to abandon President Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill and submit the issue to a constitutional amendment.

Declaring the people had a right to determine for themselves any permanent change in the supreme court, Wheeler announced he would support any reasonable proposal for amending the judicial provisions of the constitution.

Serves Notice

He served notice as leader of the opposition there would be an all-summer debate of the issue, if the administration insists upon forcing a decision in the senate.

Wheeler said:

"I am not for any compromise of the court bill. It should be passed in its original form or defeated. There is no reason whatever for increasing the personnel of the supreme court, after it has rendered all its recent decisions in favor of the New Deal. And there is one vacancy now on the court.

"Besides, the court belongs to all the people and not to any one administration. If they must make a permanent change in the court,

Sanity Of Irwin Center Of Battle In Triple Slaying

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 29.—Swept by the cycle of his diseased mind into a state of utmost depression, Robert Irwin sat sullen and silent in the tombs today as District Attorney Dodge unloosed the force of law to whirl him into the electric chair.

Before the day is out, the district attorney expects the grand jury to return a first degree murder indictment against the scuptor divinity student for the Eastern morn strangling of lovely Veronica Gedeon, artists' model, and her mother, Mary, and the ice-pick stabbing of the roomer, Frank Byrne.

Sanity Is Center Of Battle.

The battle for Irwin's life, a sensational counterpart of the Loeb-Leopold trial in Chicago, is certain to center on the question of the 29-year old artist's sanity.

Dodge today also set about building up his case to prove to a jury that Irwin, although mentally sick, is legally sane and must pay with his life for the three lives he "borrowed."

The crux of the whole trial is to hinge on this simple question:

"When Irwin committed the triple murders, was he aware of the difference between right and wrong?"

If the district attorney can con-

Delay Reopening Of Strike-Bound Plants In Indiana

Truce Appeal Is Made By Governor Townsend Of Indiana

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, June 29.—Officials of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Inland Steel companies postponed the scheduled reopening of their strike-bound plants in the Calumet region today pending a truce appeal to John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chieftain, by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana.

Gov. Townsend sent to Lewis his settlement plan which calls for reopening of the steel plants on a "status quo" basis until a decision is returned by the National Labor Relations board on charge that Inland violated the Wagner Labor Relations act. Hearings on the Inland case were in full swing here today.

Both steel companies, employing 20,000 men in East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and South Chicago, postponed the scheduled reopening today at the request of Gov. Townsend, who reported that "definite progress is being made" in his plans for a temporary settlement of the month-long strike.

The governor said officials of the two steel companies had given their assent to his peace plan. Gov. Townsend then dispatched state labor commissioner Hutson to Washington to sound out Lewis on the agreement.

Governor Earle Sees President

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 29.—Gov. George H. Earle, who last week endorsed President Roosevelt for a third term, planned to see the chief executive in Washington today in an effort to obtain additional PWA funds for Pennsylvania's $60,000,000 institutional building program.

PWA's action last week in rescinding relief labor restrictions on proposed grants, the governor believes, will entitle Pennsylvania to more than $9,000,000 above the $20,000,000 already assured.

Mayor Evans Declares Emergency Period In City Is Ended

ROD AND WIRE MILL IS STARTED

(International News Service)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 29—As steel company officials reported a growing tide of workers returning to their jobs, Mayor Lionel Evans early today declared the "emergency period" proclaimed during the steel strike was ended and lifted the liquor ban.

Meanwhile, the belief grew that Gov. Martin L. Davey will remove the National Guard later this week. The Mahoning county grand jury, recalled by Prosecutor William A. Ambrose, heard testimony of policemen, deputies, and others involved in the numerous outbreaks during the strike at the Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company plants.

Sheet & Tube today reported opening of its rod and wire division at Struthers with 800 of the normal 1400 at work. Republic Steel announced opening of its Bessemer furnace in the downtown plant normally employing 900 men. R. L. Leventry, superintendent, declined to estimate the number at work.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins today conceded the collapse of the efforts of the federal steel mediation board to settle the steel strike, after more than an hour's conference with Charles P. Taft, chairman of the board.

Taft, who is sailing for Europe in a few days, called at the secretary's office to submit his report on the failure of the board to bring officials of the independent steel companies and heads of the SWOC together in an agreement.

"There is nothing more that the board can do," she said, "and I do not contemplate naming a successor to Mr. Taft."

French Cabinet Gives Approval To Bonnet's Plan To Meet Financial Crisis

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
(International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, June 29.—"Balance the budget, defend the currency, combat speculation, reform the treasury and reform the country's economic situation."

These points, an official communique stated today, are part of Finance Minister Georges Bonnet's program for straightening out France's financial crisis which has been unanimously approved by the French cabinet.

Announcement that Bonnet's program had been approved was made after a two-hour cabinet session at the Elysee Palace. The meeting followed a late series of conferences which led to suspension of payments in gold and closing of the bourse.

Displays Iron Fist

Bonnet, former ambassador to Washington, who rushed home to assume charge of the finance ministry in the monetary crisis, displayed an iron fist as he struggled to defend the franc against speculation and inflation.

At the same time the ministerial council approved Premier Camille Chautemps general program, which will be presented to parliament this afternoon.

Although the entire program was not disclosed, it was understood in all authoritative quarters to include

CROWDS ARE MENACING AS SUSPECTS ARE SOUGHT IN FIENDISH COAST CRIME

Find Three Missing Girls Had Been Slain In California Area

Gigantic Man-Hunt Under Way To Capture The Triple Killer

By RALPH B. JORDAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, June 29.—Three little girls lay cold in death here today, but over their pitifully broken bodies flamed a spirit of vengeance the equal of which has not been seen in the west in this generation.

From border to border—from Mexico to Canada—the citizenry of the western slope joined with peace officers in a grim hunt for the fiend who lured the children from a park in Inglewood, suburb of Los Angeles, last Saturday afternoon and then attacked and murdered them.

The children, daughters of modest Inglewood homes, Melba Marie Everett, 8; her sister Madeline Everett, 7, and Jeanette Marjorie Stephens, 8, were found late yesterday in a ravine in the Baldwin Hills, between Los Angeles and Inglewood.

"Fiend Is Loose"

Governor Frank F. Merriam, at Sacramento, called upon all peace officers in the state to devote themselves to capturing the slayer.

"I call upon all peace officers to exert their best efforts," he said, after exclaiming that "a fiend is loose among us" and "society demands that he be caught and dealt with promptly and justly."

The victims lay parallel about five yards apart, their heads in the same direction, their throats encircled by strands of clothesline. They had been strangeld, but first they had been outraged—fiendish prelude to a merciful death.

Discovery of the bodies, by four Boy Scouts, so shocked and horrified this entire metropolitan community that peace officers were faced not only with the problem of solving the crime, but of protecting suspects as they were brought in for questioning.

Crowd Surrounds Police Station

Around the Inglewood police station a crowd of between 1500 and 2,000 persons kept vigil during the night, and as the forces of the law shifted their bases of operations so did the citizens, who were frankly bent on administering justice in

Says Management And Labor Must Find Way To Avoid Strikes

BOTH SIDES MUST HAVE RESPONSIBILITY

(International News Service)

MILWAUKEE, June 29. — Management and labor must find a way to settle their differences without strikes, Donald R. Richburg, one-time N. R. A. chief, told the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen here Monday.

Adressing the Brotherhood's annual convention, Richberg advanced a vigorous argument against the strike as wasteful and useless, and called on labor and management to realize that their interests and thus their responsibilties, are identical.

To Eliminate Strikes

"An outstanding need of today, to insure national prosperity, to increase employment, and to raise the average standard of living," he said, "is to find a way to adjust differences between employers and employes, as fairly as human ability will permit, without stopping the wheels of industry to waste time and money in fighting each other when we should be working together."

In order to accomplish this, Richberg, a frequent advisor of President Roosevelt, said both employer and employee must realize responsibilities.

"In this day of disturbed and changing industrial relations," he went on, "it cannot be emphasized too strongly or too frequently that employers and employees have an identical interest in improving and increasing employment.

a demand for plenary powers even stronger than those which former Premier Leon Blum demanded, effective until August 31. Blum was sent to defeat by the senate, which refused to grant him the dictatorial financial powers he demanded.

Like the defeated Blum program, Chautemps' demands are understood to include increased taxes.

It was understood the government intends to drive the measures through parliament, fighting off all proposed amendments.

The chamber of deputies will sit all night. Government officials hope the program will be passed by noon tomorrow.

Already "howling" against the financial measures has begun in some quarters, but informed circles predicted the plenary powers will be granted in accordance with the cabinet's desires.

They said this was likely because of the gravity of the crisis and the parliament's faith in the soundness and financial expertness of Bonnet.

WHEELER MAKES CHALLENGE ON COURT PROPOSAL

let them submit it in the form of a constitutional amendment, so the people can pass upon it in final judgment."

Poll On New Compromise Plan

Administration leaders were having the senate polled anew on the Hatch compromise. This proposal, offered by Senator Hatch (D) of New Mexico, would provide for the appointment of one new justice each year, so long as a corresponding justice remained on the court after the age of 70. Under it, the personnel of the court would fluctuate between nine and fifteen justices.

Earlier, an administration poll showed heavy support for the Logan compromise. Based upon the Hatch proposal and offered by Senator Logan (D) of Kentucky, it would authorize the annual appointment of a new justice only if a corresponding justice remained on the court after the age of 75.

Original Bill Dead

The president's original court bill was regarded as dead, unless some legislative miracle occurs. Even administration leaders no longer claimed a majority of the senate favored it but privately conceded it would be rejected if brought to a vote now. This attitude served merely to increase their activities in behalf of a compromise.

Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, announced the court fight would be postponed until after July 4.

through all the motions of the marriage service—omitting only the important "I do's."

"I don't want to make any mistakes tomorrow," grinned the happy bridegroom-to-be.

Elaborate Wedding

So elaborate is the wedding, so numerous the attendants, that Mrs. MacMillan intended to put them through their paces several times to make sure that each bridesmaid knows her place in the procession, each usher his duty.

Since the briday party is as large as the chorus of a musical comedy, this is no small feat. There are eight bridesmaids, a best man and thirteen ushers.

The Christ church, to which the president and many notables will come tomorrow for the wedding, was a bower of white peonies and lilies for the "preview" of the ceremony. Tall palms, screens of lace-like fern, and thousands of white blossoms made the little chapel a fairyland.

Informa. Dinner

After the rehearsal Ethel and Franklin will entertain their attendants at an informal early dinner at the Vice Meade Hunt club, a short distance from Owl's Rest, the bride's home.

They are dining there instead of at the DuPont mansion because the house is decorated for tomorrow's wedding and there is to be little activity there until the reception guests arrive.

The bridal party danced until the small hours this morning at the Hunt club, where they attended a dinner and dance given by Mrs. J. A. Montgomery, Jr., Ethel's maternal aunt.

CROWDS MENACING AS SUSPECTS ARE SOUGHT IN CRIME

the manner of the old west—with a rope over the limb of the nearest tree.

Hundreds of deputy sheriffs, police and district attorney's investigators rounded up suspects during the night, raced with them to jails in Los Angeles and several suburbs, but turned them loose as they provided alibis, but as crowds howled at their heels.

During the early hours of the hunt, peace officials concentrated on finding one man in particular, a man on parole after conviction of having attacked another Inglewood girl. He was discovered in Olympia, Wash., however, and police there said he had not been out of Olympia since the Inglewood girls disappeared.

Eliminate One Suspect

With the elimination of this suspect, the forces of the law struck quickly later in the day at Wilmington, harbor city 20 miles from Los Angeles, and at Del Mar, 20 miles north of San Diego.

A suspect was picked up in each place and was being questioned.

They answered the general description of the slayer, but officers said there was nothing definite yet to connect them with the slayings.

There were many people taken into cutsody, of course, by the various peace agencies in the west, but officials here said they were being held only for questioning thus far—no evidence as yet to definitely connect them with the Inglewood crime.

A post-morten examination of the bodies, according to the coroner, disclosed that each of the three little girls had been attacked and choked to death with the cords.

A fiendish macabre touch to the crime was furnished by the slayer when he placed the childrens' shoes a few yards from the bodies. The three little pairs of shoes, worn and scuffed at school and at play, had been placed neatly side by side.

As the angry crowd grew and surged in the street of Inglewood, Eugene Williams, chief investigator of the Los Angeles county district attorney's office, and Capt. William Penprase of the sheriff's office feared to bring anymore suspects to the Inglewood station.

Crowd Refuses To Leave

Williams faced the crowd and shouted:

"We believe we know who did this. Now, it won't do any good for you to gather here. We'll take care of him when we catch him. You can back us up when he is tried. Please go home."

The crowd stayed.

Williams and Penprase transferred their center of operations to the district attorney's office in Los Angeles, declaring the search will continue without stop, night and day, until the murderer is captured.

Several similar characteristics in the crimes caused the authorities in Los Angeles to check with the police in Tacoma, Wash., regarding the kidnaping and murder there last December of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, son of Dr. W. A. Mattson.

One most important clew was the finding on a hillside two miles from the scene of the murder of a pair of blue overalls stained with what was believed to be blood. The overalls may have been discarded for others by the murderer in his flight, officers said.

Chief of Police O. E. Campbell of Inglewood disclosed that on Friday, when he met the girls in the park, the murderer had amused them by tying fancy knots in a piece of cord. The lines drawn tight on the necks of the slain girls were each fastened in the back with a double hitch knot.

Girl Brought Rope

The rope little Olive Everett brought for the 'genial stranger" was the rope that was used to strangle her sisters to death, Campbell said.

The boy scouts, had been trudging the hills all morning. They were struggling along the slippery sides of the gully when one of them made the grewsome find.

It was the body of Jeanette Stephens. That was all they saw—the one body. They turned and ran, stumbling and scrambling to a street, where they flagged down a passing motorist, who took them to the Inglewood police station.

The hand of Melba Marie was clutched tightly as if she had struggled. Police chemist Roy Pincker took scraping from the fingernails for chemical analysis and a possible aid in the eventual positive identification of the slayer.

Abrasions on the faces, Doctor Wagner said, were caused when their heads were forced into the earth.

From Doctor Wagner's report and other circumstances, it was deduced that the murders were committed either late Saturday afternoon or in the dark of Saturday night. The fire, officers pointed out, would indicate the slayer waited until nightfall.

On the narrow path along the gully, officers found pieces of bread, indicating the children had saved the sandwiches Mrs. Everett had given them to eat in the park and had consumed them as they were walking to their horrible deaths. The children were in the habit of picnicking in the park and Mrs. Everett thought it nothing unusual when they took the sandwiches with them Saturday.

Los Angeles, June 29.—Search for the fiend-slayer of three little Inglewood girls swung suddenly today to the ultra-fashionable Bel-Air section as hundreds of peace officers established a cordon along all major highways there.

The shift in the man-hunt, one of the most determined in the history of the west, followed a report by a butler in a Bel-Air home that a man answering the description of the mad murderer tried to sell him an old car last night.

As the officers closed in on the new front, they were followed by the crowd of infuriated citizens who, since the discovery of the broken bodies late yesterday, have watched all developments in the case with the openly expressed determination to deal the justice of the old west—a nearrby tree and a rope—to the slayer.

Shortly after the three little girls—Madeline Everett, 7; her sister, Melba Marie Everett, 9, and Marjorie Stephens, 8, were found, strangled with a rope after being criminally attacked, the new suspect appeared at the rear door of the Bel-Air home, according to the butler.

The butler said the man answered the description of the fiend, that his clothing was blood-stained and that he said:

"I've got to sell my car; I've got to sell it. I'll take $15 for it and you can have it."

TROOP SETTLES INTO ROUTINE OF CAMP DUTY

tents for electricity, though it was remarked that possibly their enthusiasm arose from the fact that they could slide down the sides of the tents from the ridge pole. When all this was completed, the bed ticks were filled with straw and the beds were made up.

Before the troopers knew it, mess call had sounded for supper, and a mad scramble ensued, the result of which kept the cooks from having to throw away a single bite. In fact they cleaned up on everything so completely that First Sergeant Wolfbrandt, who seemed to have something on his mind and failed to arrive immediately, was just left without anything whatever to eat, thus putting everyone in such humor that they scarcely minded the reprimands he had issued for the misdeeds of the day.

The remainder of the day was spent in just "talking it over" and when taps was sounded, a troop of tired troopers beat hasty retreat to their cots and sweet repose.

Troop Awakens

With a bugler playing first call, the Regimental band tuning up, and a cannon blazing away, it was not difficult for the men to get away bright and early for a new day Sunday. Some of the new men wondered how they were expected to get dressed, shined upand shaved in ten minutes; nevertheless, Private R. S. Phillips can tell anyone it is worth while to make it, because he chopped wood for half an hour as a result of being a minute and ten seconds overtime.

The church service, in charge of the Regional chaplain was enlightening to all and put the men in a righteous frame of mind for the shake-down which took place during the afternoon.

The real work of the camp was due to start on Monday and by now, the troopers are getting hardened to their life. Mess call is about to sound again and over the whole area hangs an air of anticipation.

"We are digging in and preparing to continue this fight as it is necessary to make possible what seems inevitably to be a complete victory.

"We are not discourged by the attitude of the governor of Ohio in his use of National Guardsmen in breaking up strikes. We know that guns won't win the fight, nor intimidation on the part of any agency, whether it be the steel corporations or the state."

vince a jury Irwin did know the difference between right and wrong then the most expert psychiatric testimony would not save him from the death he says he does not fear.

Few Witnesses

So confident is he of obtaining the indictment that Dodge will take only a few witnesses before the grand jury. Chief of these is comely Mrs. Ethel Kudner, sister of Veronica. It was for love—and hate—of Ethel that Irwin went to the Gedeon apartment and took the lives of the three others.

Others subpoenaed are Mrs. Kudner's father, Joseph, and the detectives who brought Irwin back from Chicago where he made his first confession.

"I plan three moves at this time" Dodge said. "I will ask for an indictment for murder in the first degree. Second, I am anticipating an insanity defense. Third, I hope to get an early trial."

Samuel Leibowitz, whom Irwin arranged to have represent him has elected to keep secret the lines of his defense. After interviewing his client Leibowitz said:

"Res ipso liquitur"—Latin for "things speak for themselves."

Indictments Returned.

New York, June 29.—Three indictments charging first degree murder were returned quickly today against Robert Irwin, confessed triple slayer, by the New York county grand jury.

A few minutes after the indictments were handed up to general sessions Judge William Allen, the "mad sculptor" was taken from the tombs to enter his formal plea to the true bills.

the Enders apartment shortly before the bodies were found. Two men who went to investigate were met at the door by Serviss, who slammed it in their faces.

After he left, two men entered the apartment and found Mary Enders dead on the kitchen floor with two deep wounds in her skull. Her sister Jennie, also battered about the head, was lying at the head of the stairs. She was still breathing, but died later in the hospital. Two bloodstained hatchets were found in the kitchen.

In houses where there are little children, the thumb bolts on bathroom doors should be of the type that can be opened from the outside with a key, says the organ of the Federal Housing Administration.

COURT-PACKING BY PIECEMEAL JUST AS BAD

THE reported plan of administration strategists to call up the supreme court-packing bill in the senate on Wednesday and force a vote on the Hatch amendment is a striking example of the game of "putting one over." But it is a game that does not always succeed and in this case should be decisively defeated.

Perceiving that the senate would never stand for wholesale packing of the court, which received such a smashing blow from its judiciary committee, the tacticians conceived a device for beating the opposition about the stump with a compromise amendment says the Philadelphia Inquirer. President Roosevelt demanded authority to appoint six new justices.

The Hatch amendment would authorize the president to appoint one new justice a year for six years. Vacancies caused by death or retirement would not be filled so long as the number of justices did not fall below nine.

This proposal, which means piecemeal packing of the court, is based on the same pernicious principle as the original. Each year the president could put an additional justice on the bench. Year by year the executive control of the court would be insidiously extended. A piece of questionable legislation favored by an administration might be about to come before the court. An additional justice, whose attitude toward this legislation might easily be known in advance, could be appointed to the court and his single vote might decide the issue.

As Senator Wheeler told the Maryland Bar Association on Saturday, it is just as wrong to pack the supreme court with five, four, three, or two justices, or only one, as with six. The words of the senate judiciary committee regarding the president's original plan apply with equal force to this or any other compromise of the principle of the independence of our courts: it is "needless, futile and utterly dangerous." This proposed compromise should be killed.

NO THIRD TERM

Under no circumstances now foreseeable would the friends of President Roosevelt be justified in pushing him forward as a candidate for a third term in 1940.

The wholesome precedent, dating back to Washington himself, which says that two terms in the white house are enough for the best of presidents, is deeply rooted in American political thinking and approved by the judgment of thoughtful citizens. It would be difficult now, after a century and a half, to persuade the electorate that any man is so indispensable to his country that he should not retire after eight years of arduous administration.

No president has ever sought a third successive term. Grant was beaten in the convention on the third-term issue, but four years of Hayes had intervened since the close of his second term.

The earlier Roosevelt recognized the force of the precedent when in 1904 he ruled himself out of the 1908 contest. Yet Roosevelt's re-election in 1908 would have been for a second, not a third, elective term.

Coolidge faced a parallel situation when in 1927 he did "not choose to run." Roosevelt later regretted the precipitancy which led to his act of abnegation. Observing the trend of circumstances that followed Coolidge's voluntary retirement, it is probable the gentleman from Northampton harbored no regrets.

Few men in American history have been so honored and so trusted by his contemporaries as Franklin D. Roosevelt. His triumphant election and even more triumphant re-election gave him a place in the annals of his country which any man in the future will find it difficult to attain.

The third-term issue is brought to the front now by the statement of Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania who, in denying any presidential aspirations of his own, declares himself for Mr. Roosevelt's re-election "unqualifiedly and finally." This statement follows close on the heels of news dispatches from Harrisburg that a pro-Roosevelt third-term move was being promoted there by spokesmen for organized labor and Democratic workers and that the move "has not been discouraged" by Chairman Farley.

Men whose political careers are linked closely with the president's and those whose tenure of office depends on his remaining in the white house may naturally look with favor on the proposal to keep the president there until 1945. On the contrary, men who believe that under a republican form of government there is an element of danger in giving to any person vast power for too long a period will have serious doubts touching the present third-term suggestion.

This thought is given additional emphasis by the character of the times and the problems certain to confront America in the next few years.

The Plain Dealer thinks it would be a fine bit of statesmanship on Mr. Roosevelt's part to say now, as the other Roosevelt said more than four years before the expiration of his term, that he will not seek another election to the presidency. Such a declaration would clear the political atmosphere, and raise the president in the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.—Cleveland Plain Dealer (Dem.)

The Road To Industrial Peace

(From Philadelphia Inquirer)

The acts of violence and other disturbing manifestations marking the many industrial disputes during the last few weeks have served to strengthen that large body of public opinion which demands some reasonable and constructive plan for insuring peace between employers and employees.

Such a plan must be fair not only to capital and labor but to the third great party at interest, whose rights so often are ignored, the general public. Wherever the blame belongs in any given case, no American community can tolerate pitched battles between conflicting elements, wholesale destruction of property, the seizure and holding of private premises "for ransom," the breaking of contracts and the forcible denial of the employee's right to work, which is as inalienable as his right to strike.

American labor has much to gain through a stabilizing of the industrial situation that will clearly define not only its legitimate rights but those of others, who are affected by every stoppage of work. A law that imposes equal obligations upon employers and employees, that makes both responsible for their acts, should tend to allay bitternesses and to promote that cooperation without which neither can prosper.

A one-sided law, on the other hand, which fails to hold the balance of justice true, tends to defeat these objectives. The Wagner act, to which employees only may appeal, with charges of unfair practices and demands for elections for

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

LEFT HANDEDNESS

A great many teachers throughout this nation still compel their left-handed children to use the right hand in written work. Judging from the letter I get from my Canadian readers, the same occurs in the Dominion. Let me give just one sample. The mother writes:

"I have a daughter of nine years whose symptoms are practically the same as those described in your article for the boy of three. She naturally is left-handed. When she started to public school the teacher made her use her right hand, and her stuttering grew worse...and she still has to use her right hand at school. For everything except school work she naturally uses her left."

Fortunately, in many of the better schools teachers are trained in the schools of education, and instructed by their supervisors and principals not to interfere with the child's handedness. Some wise teachers even encourage the stuttering or nervous and timid child who is normally left-handed, but who writes with the right hand, to try writing with the left hand, though not forcing him to do so. In some speech clinics the stutterer who even thinks he is right-handed is encouraged to write with the left hand.

Photographs Left-Handed Group

I wish I had space to reproduce a photograph I took of 23 elementary school children corralled in one school of Cleveland—all of them writing, as they regularly do, with the left hand—and a photograph of a similar group of left-handed writers in a junior high school of another school system.

When I was a teacher in a school for training teachers in New York City, and later in Cleveland, I would give every class of my students an exercise in which they were set to writing with the wrong hand continuously for fifteen minutes. The fatigue and emotional experience of these students was far more convincing to them than an hour's lecture on the torment to left-handed children forced to write with the right hand.

Stuttering is chiefly an emotional affliction. Certainly it is made worse by emotional disturbance. Force a left-handed child to write with his right hand and you may make a sutterer of him; or, if he already stutters, add to his affliction. Parents may do like harm to the young child if they coerce him into changing handedness. My advice to parents and teachers is: Don't tamper with the child's handedness.

MEN AND FISH

He tossed the bait into the brook
And caught a fish upon the hook.
That night in camp we heard him say:
"For ages long, from day to day
It's really very strange to me
That fish have never learned to see
The deadly barb beneath the fly
And in their wisdom pass it by.

"All day the while I've fished I've thought
About the various ones I've caught
And each has jumped to snatch the lure
Believing that his meal was sure.
The trout beholds a morsel fine;
Thinks it an easy way to dine
And lands before he's had his meal
Into some artful angler's creel.

"It seems to me the wily trout
By now should know to look in doubt
On such allurements and beware
Of easy meals men dangle there;
But no! They grab the tempting bait
And feel the hidden barbs, too late!
They never learn, as mortals do
The difference twixt false and true."

"Ah! laughed another. "Mortals make
Continually the same mistake!
Let some one offer golden gains
The greed for profit has no brains!
Mankind believes this even yet
Something for nothing he can get.
Doubt it? Well count the loss you've booked
And see how often you've been hooked."

NIGHT CLUBS

"Night clubs came in with prohibition and they went out with repeal, but nobody seems to realize it," a Miami night club operator remarks. Miami will be the last place to realize it, if it is ever realized, because people come to Miami to play and night clubs take a very definite place in the city's play-life. There would be a very definite void if visitors awoke some day to find the night clubs gone.

Good Taste

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.

By Francine Markel

DEAR MISS MARKEL—We are building a new home, which will be very small. Our combination living room and dining room is only 12 by 16. We thought of partitioning it off to make two separate rooms but have decided that each would be too small. So we plan to keep one large room. How should it be furnished—with both living room and dining room furniture?
HOME-BUILDER.

Answer—In its present condition, this room is sufficiently large to give you comfort but if you partition it off the resultant rooms will be too small.

A friend of mine has just such a room which is completely furnished as a living room. She has a gateleg table which, except during meal times, she keeps folded and placed against the wall. She has a very attractive screen which she places in front of the dining table during meals, thus hiding it from the view of possible visitors who may enter while the table is set.

A few windsor chairs are appropriate for both living room and dining room.

A sideboard of the usual type would be inappropriate for a combination living-dining room but a secretary desk would be attractive as well as useful for such a room. Store your linens and silver in its drawers. Put curtains over its glass doors and place your dishes on its upper shelves.

Present-Day Problems Universal.
Other Countries Are Perplexed Too.
France Manages Armament Plants.

By LESLIE EICHEL
Central Press Columnist

ONE IS impressed, as he reads foreign papers, how much our problems are not ours alone, but part of the world's problems. The same questions come up, in a different form, in every country. In the dictator countries, the questions are suppressed and the problems temporarily (one may be assured of that) are declared "solved".

People of all nations are bewildered. In some nations, they hide their heads in the sand with a form of modern voodooism and pretend not to be perplexed. But they are getting themselves into such a tangle—by trying to avoid the perplexities—that they seem merely to be blustering and blundering into war and reducing living standards to the unbearble minimum.

In the United States, President Roosevelt is denounced from several sides for not giving "pause" to the New Deal. The same is true of the Popular Front in France, where a hold-over conservative senate majority caused the downfall of the Blum government even though the Socialists have a tremenduous popular vote majority and immediately set up another cabinet.

FAMILIAR?

Does this not sound familiar?

"When last March the Blum government proclaimed a 'pause' in the increase of public expenditure there were many who interpreted this as meaning that the Front Popuaire program had been 'suspended'," says the Paris correspondent of the Manchester, England, Guardian.

"While in reality the 'pause' meant that the government would not enter upon any far-reaching and costly reforms for the time being, and would even reduce certain large items of extra-budgetary expenditure (particularly public works), it did not mean that the practical application of the reform already voted by parliament would be stopped. That this was so has clearly been shown, since the proclamation of the 'pause', by the new decrees extending to scores of new trades the 40-hour week, and by the decrees nationalizing several more armaments firms."

DEMOCRACY FIRST

Yet, one merely has to read the articles being sent home by Colonel Frank Knox (late Republican vice presidential candidate) and being published in American papers, to see how much even a conservative American prefers French democracy as well as American democracy, to any of the "supposed" forms of governments of continental Europe.

It is as if one is coming out of prison into liberty to arrive in France from Germany, or Italy, or Greece, or Hungary, or Austria, etc., for in France there is democracy and self-determination for labor and humanity generally, Colonel Knox says.

He can see no solution of problems, no forward step except through democracy—and, he indicates, it must be democracy in large doses.

A year ago the Republican high command might have termed the colonel's present articles communistic, or to the left of Roosevelt. It is feared if any more Republicans go to Europe, the conservatives will have no party left by 1940.

NATIONALIZATION

Steel manufacturers in the United States, who by the way are the largest armament manufacturers, were shocked by the ease in which governors can close their plants during strikes. Their thought was that the federal government, in some emergency, could with the same ease nationalize their plants.

France has nationalized her armament plants. Thus the fear of the American manufacturers is a valid one.

We read further from the Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guadian:

"According to all authoritative opinions this large and water-tight control mechanism is working completely satisfactorily, and a particularly qualified expert told me the other day: 'I can understand that a country like Britain, which, unlike us, has no expert engineering cadres in the army, should hesitate to take over big armament firms, but there seems no reason at all why she should not set up a control mechanization similar to ours.'

"The same expert emphasized a number of other important facts; that experience in France had shown that the output in the nationalized works had not diminished, but increased; that the price the state paid for armaments (allowance being made, of course, for increased costs of labor and raw materials, which in the last year would have risen in any case) was considerably lower than it would be without nationalization; that quality and the readiness of scientists to supply their inventions had

TRAINS OF MAGIC

After days of unbounded rejoicing over the historic opening of the world's greatest suspension span across the Golden Gate, they're settling down to normalcy again, in the San Francisco Bay region.

They can now await a third bridge opening occasion, due sometime in 1938. A much more modest one, to be sure. But in a sense, you see, the San Francisco-Oakland bridge, celebrated just six months ago, is as yet only half open.

Still to come in a finished lower deck, complete with rail facilities to whisk commuters and other non-motorists across the vast stretch of water. And as an achievement in railroading, if you could call it that, the setup that Southern Pacific and Key System plan to erect will be quite as extra ultra as the great Boy Bridge itself.

Magic eyes, magic brains, almost these electric trains will have, so that they can speed along spaced exactly sixty-five or seventy-five seconds apart, even in fog so thick the engineer can't see ten feet ahead. Variously colored lights flashing on the instrument board tell him the speed he must hold to keep spaced properly in the parade of trains.

A sort of microphone peers out in front for him. And if he fails to act within two and a half seconds after a colored light changes, brakes grip the wheels hard immediately.

Magic-brained trains, speeding across the world's largest bridge. It sounds like a chapter from an H. G. Wells fantasy of the future.

The theater had a thatched roof! There were boxes over the stage, forcing some of the spectators to face the rest of the audience and the backs of the actors!

June 29, 1819—Thomas Dunn English was born in Philadelphia, future author of both songs and laws of the nation. He was 24 when he sent a song to a publisher with a note: "If you don't like it burn it, and something will be sent when the writer is more in the vein." The song was Ben Bolt! It was hummed in old world and new by the time he was elected to congress from New Jersey.

June 29, 183—Nathaniel Eaton had nine scholars around him in the house of William Peyntree in Cowyard Rowe, Cambridge, Mass.—the beginning of Harvard college, which was authorized three centuries ago this year.

The first president of Harvard, Eaton built a six-foot wooden fence around the grounds to keep the students in, beat his students black and blue, was charged with stealing money left by John Harvard, finally

Claim Millions In Taxes Lost To Federal Treasury

Treasury Officials Claim Personal Holding Company Scheme Beats Law

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29—Millions of dollars in taxes have escaped the federal treasury through the creation and operation of personal holding companies, treasury officials informed the senate-house tax committee today in appealing to congress to plug the loopholes.

More than a dozen names of wealthy individuals who have organized such companies to avoid taxes were supplied the committee together with vivid description of how they operate.

Among those named were:

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Raskob.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Sloan (chairman of General Motors.)

Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate.

A. W. Mellon, ex-secretary of the treasury.

Paul Mellon, a son.

Ailsa Mellon Bruce, a daughter.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Dupont Ross.

F. V. Dupont.

Paulina Dupont Kean.

Charles E. Merill and Edmund C. Lynch, partners in a New York securities investment firm.

Carter Lupton, Cattanooga financier.

Owen B. Winters, New York.

Conceding the devices utilized to be legal under existing law, treasury officials nevertheless insisted that the law is faulty, that congress never intended to permit such tax avoidance and appealed for remedial action.

By the device of incorporating farms, country estates, even racing stables, the individuals named were enabled to establish "losses" and create a multiplicity of deductions so as to materially reduce their tax liability, the committee was told. They saved hundreds of thousands of dollars over what they would have paid had their incomes been figures on a straight personal basis.

Attend Rites Today For Former Resident

A group of New Castle residents today attended funeral services in Johnstown of Ralph M. Read, remembered by many citizens as a former drug store and hotel proprietor here. Mr. Read died last Friday.

Present at the services from here were Mr. and Mrs. Max Ludwig, Miss Margaret Newman, Mrs. Rubin Elliott, Mrs. Bertha Meehan and Elmer Elliott, the latter a son-in-law of the deceased.

Later today Mr. Read will be buried at a cemetery at Oscola Mills, Pa., his home town.

If failure to pay income tax is immoral, can politicians make it moral by exempting themselves?

Kiwanis Party At New Wilmington

Club Holds Ladies' Night Celebration There; Features Are Many

Close to 90 persons, members of the New Castle Kiwanis club and their wives and lady friends and guests, enjoyed one of Kiwanis' most entertaining Ladies' Night parties in New Wilmington last night.

The club host was served a chicken dinner at the hotel there and then enjoyed a program presided over by John R. Hodge, the party's general chairman.

After President Thomas L. Paden welcomed the wives and other guests, he presented Hodge as the master-of-ceremonies. Hodge kept things moving until the program ended.

Features included a novel question-answer period between sides captained by Orville Potter and Jesse Kerr. Thomas W. Dickey conducted the question affair and judges were William Langan and B. F. Johnson.

Other highlights were a debade on "Why Young Men Should Marry" between young Mr. Hodge and Lyman Gerould; a trombone solo by Junior Kiwanian Thomas Cramer, a clarinet solo by Junior Kiwanian Gilbert Colnot and a hilarious mystic performance by Dr. J. L. Popp.

The club, in its usual humorous way, welcomed Secretary L. C. Mantz home from the Indianapolis convention of Kiwanis International.

A ladies' door prize was won by Mrs. Lyman Gerould.

Serving on the arrangements committee with Hodge were young Cramer and Colnot, both Junior Kiwanians, and B. F. Johnson.

BOMBINGS FORCE JOHNSTOWN PLANT TO HALT OPERATION

about 10:30 o'clock last night, shattered a 62-inch line about seven miles above the plant. Officials in the mill were entirely unaware of the incident until pressure gauges dropped to zero and an investigation was launched to determine the cause. The actual source of the trouble was not discovered until shortly after midnight.

A second explosion about a mile below the first and about a mile and a half on the other side, destroyed a 36-inch line a few minutes after three o'clock this morning.

Crews of men were immediately sent to the scene but because of the rough terrain—the site of the dynamitings was almost inaccessible—officials agreed that it would be some time before much could be done to repair the damage.

Company officials said at a press conference about 6,000 men who had returned to work despite the CIO strike will again be thrown into idleness until repairs can be made. Pending further inspection by their engineers and location of the breaks they were unable to estimate how long the mills will be idle.

Some men continued working following the blasts which spread new tension throughout the community but it was problematical as to how long they can continue.

Captain W. A. Clark, commander of the special force of state police left in the city after Gov. George H. Earle lifted his modified martial law proclamation last Friday, immediately ordered his 200 troopers to guard all highways leading into Johnstown and to refuse admittance to all prospective visitors.

Citizens Indignant

Clark and C. R. Ellicot, general manager of the stricken plant, had been conferring in a downtown hotel when news of the exposions reached them. "Loyal" workers at the strikebound plant and citizens were highly indignant over the explosions and some fears were felt for the safety of CIO workers and pickets whom the citizens suspected of perpetrating them.

The shutoff of water to the mills will not affect Johnstown's residential and business sections. The Quemahoning dam and the border dam were company-owned reservoirs and supplied water to the mills only. The company also controls two other dams in the nearby vicinity, but they announced that the alternate supply dams did not have sufficient water or pressure to operate the mills.

The nocturnal explosions followed on the heels of the company's statement that it had an "adequate" force in every department despite the CIO strike which entered its 18th day today.

Believed "Strike Broken"

Although James Mark, UMWA regional strike leader, asserted the mills were operating with greatly reduced forces, officials had been planing to put all activities on a full schedule basis during the current week. Sidney Evans, management representative, said that 15 of the 16 open hearths which were being used at the time the strike was called June 11, were back in use at the time of the mysterious dynamitings.

A short time earlier in the evening, Police Chief Harry Klink had expressed his belief that the strike "was definitely" broken.

Orders Probe

Harrisburg, June 29—Gov. George H. Earle today ordered a state police investigation into the dynamiting of water mains leading into the Cambria plant of the Bethlehem Steel corporation in Johnstown.

Informed by newspapermen that the pipelines had been blasted, crippling the plant, the governor telephoned Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police and ordered the investigation.

HEATING THE OVEN

A slow oven means one with a temprature of 250 to 300 degrees Fahrenheit; a moderate one from 300 to 350 degrees, and a hot oven from 400 to 450 degrees.

American farmers in 1935 harvested 298,600,000 acres, against 362,000,000 in 1934, according to the last farm census. The drought and farm acreage readjustments were responsible.

'Torture Robber' Reaches Beaver

Authorities Return Philip Poghan From Arizona To Stand Trial

THREE BUDDIES SERVING SENTENCES

(International News Service)

BEAVER, Pa., June 29—Philip Poghan, of Youngstown, sought for the past four years for the torture-robber of Theodore Bardonner, aged Economy township farmer, was brought here today from Arizona to face trial.

Poghan, who jumped bail of $15,000 following his initial arrest last January waived extradition.

After fleeing Poghan, police reported, attempted to escape detection by disguising himself and had extracted protruding front teeth. Beaver officials, however, cooperating with Western authorities, traced dental records and made certain of the suspects identity.

Three Serving Terms

Three other men, convicted of the same crime, are now serving penitentiary terms for the offense.

Poghan was returned here from Phoenix, Arizona by county Detective Charles J. O'Laughlin and Assistant Attorney William Coghlan.

Poghan and his three accomplices were accused of having tortured Bardonner, a recluse, in the belief he had a "fortune" hidden. The four were accused of tying the aged recluse to a chair, dropping blazing bits of paper between his shirt and bare back, and beating him.

Bardonner refused to tell where his "fortune" was hidden, declaring to police later he had none. Leaving their victim bruised and beaten the four fled with what money they could find, amounting to less than three dollars.

Personal Holding Company Enabled Wealthy To Escape

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29—By utilizing the device of forming a personal holding company—conceded to be legal—one wealthy taxpayer was shown to have effected savings of $648,523 in his income taxes in three years.

The case of Cartter Lupton, Chattanooga financier, was cited to the congressional tax committee today by treasury officials as illustrative of the immense amount of money that is being lost to the government annually through the operation of these holding companies.

Congress, they said, should plug such loopholes.

Going into specific cases, Abe Fortas, treasury attorney, first named the Central Shares corporation of Delaware, owned by Lupton.

collective bargaining, while employers are barred from invoking its operation, is a glaring example of such unfortunate legislation.

Recently Mr. Roosevelt remarked upon the success of collective bargaining as practiced in Great Britain. It has operated effectively, on the whole, while specifically eliminating evils that are still prevalent in this country.

The British Trade Disputes and Trade Union act of 1927, which supplemented labor and industrial laws that have been on the statute books for two generations, apparently possesses the respect and approval of both employers and employees, since there has been no movement for its repeal.

Under its terms not all strikes are legal. Strikes and lockouts are illegal if "the object is other than in furtherance of a trade dispute in the industry in which the strikers or employers are engaged." Strikes and lockouts are also outlawed if they are "designed to coerce the Government directly or by inflicting hardship on the community."

Peaceful picketing is upheld by American courts. The British law holds picketing to be illegal if accomplished in such numbers or in such manner as to intimidate workers or their families. "To intimidate" is defined as "causing in the mind of a person a reasonable apprehension of injury to himself or to any members of his family." Strikers are forbidden to "watch or beset a house where a person resides," for the purpose of inducing him to work or to refrain from working.

The Briton's right to work is as fully protected as his right to engage in a legal strike. It should be noted that the law leaves to the courts determination of whether or not a strike is legal. No appointive board has jurisdiction over this question.

This is typical of the British safeguarding of individual rights and privileges. There is no provision for compulsory arbitration or for mediation, but many industries possess their own conciliation boards that adjust most disputes before the strike stage is threatened.

British industries which do not maintain conciliation boards may avail themselves of Government industrial courts, whose decisions are not binding unless there is an advance pledge by both sides to accept them. The utter absence of any compulsory feature is notable, but plenty of official machinery is available for voluntary action.

The essence of the British law is complete fairness to employers and employees alike. Collective bargaining has been promoted through ordaining the legal responsibility of both sides. Workers and employers feel a common security. They know that contracts will be kept.

The framing of a plan to guarantee equal benefits to American industry and labor requires much thought and care. We may or may not profitably borrow ideas from other nations. Our problems differ in many respects from theirs. The British law is not to be assumed to be the last word on this subject. It contains provisions that might not be found practicable or desirable for this country. Any law passed by Congress must be sound, just and impartial, truly American in letter and spirit.

Existing conditions are as intolerable to law-abiding labor, employers and the public as they are unjust. This country can not stand any longer for attempted settlement of industrial disputes by armed guards and armed pickets. An end must be put to threats, violence and bloodshed. The term "battlefront" must be rendered obsolete as applying to future relations between American labor and management.

The time has come for both sides to utter those immortal words: "Let us have peace." A way can be found—it must be found—to substitute the rule of reason for that of force and to seal the compact with a law that will serve as a bulwark of that enduring peace in American industry which all good citizens so ardently desire.

The World At A Glance

not suffered in the least; that many foreign governments, far from taking their orders elsewhere, were only too pleased to deal directly with the state instead of with private manufacturers; and that the state of mind of the armaments workers was infinitely more satisfactory after than before nationalism. They felt that they were working no longer for 'merchants of death', but for the state, and it made a big difference. There had been no strikes in the nationalized works. The whole psychological atmosphere at these works had enormously improved.

"Another remark made to me by a high French authority deserves to be recorded: 'Since the nationalization law the press controlled or influenced by the armaments firms no longer indulges in war scares. Less is said about the German menace today, after four years of Hitler rule, than in 1930, when Germany was virtually disarmed.'"

Acquit Woman On Manslaughter Charge At Beaver

(International News Service)

BEAVER, Pa., June 29.—Mrs. Anna Sankofski, 55, charged with causing the death of an infant by ordering gas and electric service cut off in a house where the tenants owed her $11 back rent, was free today of a charge of manslaughter.

Judge Frank E. Reader who heard the case without a jury handed down an acquittal verdict, ruling the commonwealth had failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that shutting off the gas and electricity caused the death of the child who had been suffering from penumonia. The infant, Constance Carol daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zancevich, was being treated in an oxygen tent with a vapor lamp which was extinguished when the current was turned off.

WASHINGTON AT A GLANCE

Contrast Foes In Labor Strife

Tom Girdler And John L. Lewis Are Opposite In Natures

GIRDLER'S WORDS ARE ULTIMATUM

Central Press
Washington Bureau
602 Times-Herald Bldg.

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Tom Girdler of Republic Steel and John L. Lewis of C. I. O. are an interesting pair to contrast, one against the other.

They are powerful personalties, both.

I know Lewis pretty well, from a number of interviews. With Girdler my only contact has been at a "press conference", plus what I saw of and heard from him as a witness before a congressional investigating committee in Washington. He is not difficult to "size up", however, even without very prolonged observation.

TWO MEN CONTRASTED

Lewis has much more of what I would call "popular appeal" than Girdler.

Girdler's attitude is, "Here's my ultimatum." And that's all there is to it, so far as he is concerned. He does not argue. He is a poker-faced stand-patter—a typical old-fashioned captain of industry. He is a survival from a past generation—perhaps a couple of generations.

Lewis is intrinsically as standpat as Girdler, but he has an appearance, at least, of more reasonableness. He tells what he considers "why", as well as merely expressing himself.

LEWIS NO "CUSSER"

Girdler did not "cuss" as a senatorial committee witness; his surroundings slightly restrained him. But is a good "cusser" (in fact a wonder) in a freer atmosphere.

Indeed, "cussing" is his stock in trade, generally speaking.

I do not adversely criticize this technique. I believe in it, when justifiable.

Lewis does not "cuss". At least, I never have heard him do it. His "press conferences" are as decorous as any "press conference" at the White House. He says what he has to say and he knows how to say it with as little profanity as any college professor, or clergyman. There is no "rough stuff" about him—but, believe me, he is forcible.

LOOKS "FEROCIOUS"

Lewis looks ferocious in his pictures.

That is on account of his "mane" that the newspapers always refer to, and his shaggy eyebrows, and his jutting under jaw. He is not a tall man, but I understand he weighs above 200. Most of it is concentrated in chest and shoulders. It does make him look formidable.

I suppose he makes an enemy genuinely shudder.

But he is mild mannered—except, perhaps, in action.

UNCOMPROMISING GIRDLER

Girdler does not look so fierce in the pictures.

He is not so bulky as Lewis.

Yet he does look uncompromising. He has not an affable expression.

AS TO FUTURE RATING?

Lewis, after all, is a coupe of things besides a labor leader:

He is a politician and a diplomat. He has to be.

Girdler is a defensive fighter—"solomente", as the Spaniards say.

Conditions Bad At Santandor

(International News Service)

BORDEAUX, France, June 29.—Grim reports of conditions at Santander, last major Basque stronghold which face a siege by advancing Spanish Insurgents, reached here Monday telling of 10,000 wounded soldiers virtually without medical aid.

Many of the wounded, owing to lack of facilities, have been left almost completely untended, the reports stated.

A CANDID CADDIE

A golfer had lost his ball, and was inclined to be annoyed with his caddie. "Why didn't you watch where it went?" he went angrily. "Well, sir," said the boy, "it doesn't usually go anywhere, and so it took me unprepared like."

Farmers Discuss Conservation Plan For Year Of 1938

Leaders In Agricultural Conservation Program Make Recommendations For Next Year

Seventeen farmers, leaders of Lawrence county, including Harry L. McCurley, president; Dorris L. Fulkman Frank F. Forbes, members of the 1937 Agricultural Conservation committee; Eugene Sampson, president of Lawrence County Agricultural Extension association; County Agent Harold McCulloch met at the Y. M. C. A. to discuss recommendations for the 1938 program.

Farms in Lawrence county generally are in poorer condition than they were 25 years ago due to continued depletion of the soil. Many Lawrence county farms are lying idle as farm owners and operators have moved to the towns or cities to work in local industries or our operating the farm part time and not supplying the soil with conservation practices which maintain or build up the soil.

Conservation practices, as pointed out by this group, which more attention must be given are pasture improvement, reforestation, seeding legumes (alfalfa and clover), and winter cover crops. Benefits of these practices are—prevent soil erosion, flood control measure by retaining excessive rains on the soil, and maintain and build up the soil for the salvation of future generations.

The Lawrence County committee has made the above recommendations to the State Agricultural Conservation committee for their use in planning the 1938 program.

Mr. McCurley states that 995 Lawrence county farmers have already enrolled in the 1937 program. The final date for enrollment to participate is July 15. Farmers desiring to participate in the 1937 program can enroll and receive information concerning the program at the Lawrence County Agricultural Conservation office, 427 Court street, New Castle, Pa.

Finally Mahoney resorted to an international word: "Vamoose!" he shouted. The driver vamoosed—with a smile.

SAFETY WEEK DRIVE BEGINS

Safest And Most Courteous Auto Drivers In Ellwood Will Be Designated

ELLWOOD CITY, June 29.—The Chamber of Commerce is urging all civic organizations in Ellwood to solidly back the "Safety Week" campaign. As their own personal interest in the campaign the chamber will issue 1,000 windshield stickers through the local police to the thousand safest and most courteous drivers in Ellwood.

Local police have instructions to only give these stickers to those who prove the merit of having one. Charles Z. Bell and Denny Schill, president and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce respectively have been working the last few days on a plan whereby the "Safety Week" would go into effect for the entire year and also where the local police can enforce law to anyone needing such action without the patrolman having to worry about the matter being fixed up because the offender holds some public office or has friends to patch things up. If you are a proud possessor of a "Safe and courteous driver" sticker remember you are deserving of it and it is the greatest civic work you can do for your city.

G. O. P. Executive Committee Will Meet Thursday

State Party Finances Will Be Chief Theme For Day's Discussion

(International News Service)

HARRISBUG, June 29.—The twofold purpose of measuring party feeling on the GOP state chairmanship and of setting up financial machinery for the all-important registration drive, capitol circles indicated today, occasioned the calling of Thursday's meeting of Republican state executive committee.

Executive committeemen were summoned to show themselves in Pittsburgh Thursday by G. Edward Green, acting committee chairman since the resignation of M. Harvey Taylor on June 18.

Some observers said that Green, a likely candidate for the full term as chairman, wished to "smoke out" sentiment on his own retention and at the same time "pin down" party leaders on the matter of financing future G. O. P. activities.

Taylor's resignation, after months of Republican party strife over leadership and executive policy, was said to have been brought to a head by differences over financial expenditures. Of the party's two chief contributors in Pennsylvania, former Sen. Joseph R. Grundy and Joseph N. Pew, Philadelphia oil magnate, at least one was not available for consultation. Pew, it was learned in Philadelphia, was enroute to Nova Scotia for a month's vacation.

Amendments To Relief Measure Given Approval

Life Of PWA Extended To July 1, 1939, By Rider Attacked To Relief Bill

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29.—In last minute action, the house today approved senate amendments to the $1,500,000,000 relief bill, sending the measure to the White House.

Life of the PWA was extended to July 1, 1939, in a rider. Both PWA and WPA authorizations would have expired tomorrow.

By agreement in both branches, the bill was amended to earmark $71,000,000 for school projects, where hazardous conditions exist; $92,000,000 for projects where bonds have been voted by local communities; and $17,000,000 where state legislatures have voted appropriations for projects.

Rep. Taber of New York, ranking Republican on the house appropriations committee, warned the house that it was "merely continuing the extravagance and inefficiency of WPA," and asserted the total appropriation amounted to $1,974,000,000 because of re-appropriations of $474,000,000 available to the president.

See Long Controversy Over Wage And Hour Proposal In Congress

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 29—A controversy ranking second only to the court fight in intensity, was foreseen today by congressional leaders as they prepared to drive a minimum wage and maximum hours bill through before adjournment.

The Democratic majority in both senate and house was revealed in group discussion at the three-day Jefferson Island peace parley as being badly split on many phases of the proposed legislation.

So diverse is the opinion among members that Rep. Patman (D) of Texas, suggested to house leaders that a Democratic caucus be called in an effort to find out whether a party agreement can be reached on legislation.

Will Be Bitterly Fought

"It will be a bitterly fought measure," said Patman, after canvassing sentiment among members of congress

The senate labor committee may report a bill this week, while the house labor committee will meet tomorrow to begin framing a measure based upon the original Black-Connery bills.

Rep. Ramspeck (D) of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the house labor committee, proposed drastic revision of the measure originally designed to provide a 35-40 hour week and a 40-cent minimum wage in interstate industry.

"I suggest that the board set up under the bill take no action to fix minimum wages or maximum hours unless a complaint is filed by an employe," said Ramspeck. "Then, if the board finds that any employer has an unfair competitive advantage over another in the industry, the board can act.

Would Simplify Measure

"This would greatly simlify the measure and would wipe out the chiselers.

"The bill ought not to apply where industry has a signed agreement with an organization of employes certified by the National Labor Relations Board. This is proposed in the belief that these matters can best be settled by negotiations between employers and employes.

"Under these proposals employers would not be brought under the board if employes were satisfied. When the NRA was in effect all business was upset simply because the law covered everything.

"These provisions also would take care of the question of differentials, which could be allowed if no competitive advantage were given. In many industries highly unionized, such as coal, differentials exist."

Dissatisfaction of organized labor, as represented by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, committee for industrial organization head, may make the path of senate and house labor committees more difficult. Both objected to the vast power given the proposed board to adjust wages and hours, declaring that it would interfere with collective bargaining.

Man Wounded In Strike Clash Dies Early Today

Clash At Beaver Falls Adds To Death Toll In Seven-States Steel Strike

(International News Service)

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., June 29.—The toll of dead in the seven states steel strike rose to 13 today with the death of George Mike, 45, injured in a clash late Monday between C. I. O. strikers and non-pickets at the plant of Moltrup Steel Products company here.

Mike, a bystander who came to this strike-torn city to sell tickets for a CIO dance, suffered a fractured skull when he was struck by a cartridge from a tear gas gun. He died early today in Providence hospital.

The clash occurred when 40 pickets attempted to halt 12 non-strikers from entering the Moltrup Steel Products Company plant. No effort was made to reopen the plant today but around the corner, at the Union Drawn Steel Company, a Republic Steel subsidiary, 121 men augmented by 150 workmen from Massillon, Ohio, entered the plant. The Ideal Foundry and Machine company, another Republic subsidiary, was operating with a curtailed force.

Frank Moltrup, president of the company, who stood at the entrance of the plant during the battle said he did not see the fatal fight.

"It was too bad the man was shot," Moltrup said. "The entire blame rests with the pickets."

Six state policemen today patrolled the Moltrup and Union Steel plants. Twenty-five policemen and special policemen also were on duty. Deputy sheriffs had been withdrawn.

Joseph Timko, CIO leader, said he had requested state police be sent in following the disorder.

Here's the Reason Why—CONTROLLED PENETRATION

OLD WAY: Old-Fashioned Way. Oil soaks into wood 32 cells deep, shortening life of paint.
NEW WAY: New Scientific Way. Oil penetrates only 3 cells deep, producing tough "oil-live" film of richer, longlife beauty.
Come in and let us show you the typical Sears savings! With Super Service, you save buying and applying one coat of paint! With two coats, you get exactly the same result as if you used three coats of ordinary paint. Unlike the ordinary paint in which oil soaks deep into the wood, in Super Service it stays near the top. None of it wastes away. The result is a thicker, smoother, tougher, more adhesive film. And this, in turn, insures greater coverage, richer, beauty, and longer life. Thus you save on the initial cost of Super Service...two coats instead of three—and in the years of extra wear this extra-value paint will give you.
Controlled penetration . . . the amazing new principle that gives Sears Super House Paint new, richer beauty . . . years more service! Recent research proved that the oil in old-fashioned paint penetrates deep into the wood—and wastes. By controlling this penetration, Sears now produce a finer, longer-wearing paint. In Super Service the oil stays up in the paint film . . . making it thicker, tougher, more adhesive.

Irwin's Brother Reposes In Pen

Brother Of "Triple Slayer" In New York Hopes That Kid Brother Gets Break

(International News Service)

SALEM, Ore., June 29.—Benjamin Pember Irwin, brother of the confessed "mad slayer" of three persons in New York last Easter Sunday, denied in his cell at Oregon State prison Monday reports that he had contributed toward the education of his brother, Robert Irwin.

"I haven't even heard from him for several years," he declared.

Benjamin Irwin has been in the penitentiary here most of the time during the past seven years.

When asked if he thought another brother, Vidlain Bathhurst Irwin, had contributed toward Robert's education, Benjamin said he didn't think so, "because Bob has been on his own ever since I can remember."

Greatly Concerned

He was greatly concerned about his brother's fate and eagerly questioned his interviewer about Robert's chances to escape the electric chair.

"Has he got a good attorney? Has he got any money? Did he really confess?" Benjamin asked.

He said he hoped Robert "gets a break."

Benjamin Pember Irwin was imprisoned here in 1933 on a charge of assault and robbery. It was his third term. His brother Vidlain was sentenced to prison in Washington for robbery.

They are believed to be the only remaining relatives of Robert, whose mother died here in June, 1933, while engaged in religious work. Their father died several years before.

A check of jail records revealed that Robert had not been heard from here since his departure for Los Angeles about eight years ago.

Safe Is Robbed Of $500 At Grove City

GROVE CITY, Pa., June 29.—A bold robbery during business hours at the Kroger market here netted more than $500, and left little evidence pointing to the culprits, local police stated today. State police were asked to help but the investigation has produced no clues.

The money, in bills of $5, $10 and $20 denominations, was in a paper sack in an unlocked safe at the rear of the store.

When Manager John Morris discovered the theft, the sack was gone and the dial turned, locking the safe.

The safe was in full view of clerks, but questioning showed that no one had been seen near it.

TO COOK HEART

Heart needs long, slow cooking by moist heat, in order to make it tender and delicious. It is at its best when stuffed with a savory bread dressing, browned in hot lard, a small amount of liquid added, covered tightly and allowed to cook slowly until done. It, like all other meats cooked by this method, should be cooked slowly.

Wheat is the principal grain crop of Canada.

WOULD MODERNIZE STATE'S PENAL PROGRAM

Recommendations Are Submitted

Retiring Secretary Pennington Places List In Hands Of Governor

WOULD ELIMINATE TRUSTEE BOARDS

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 29.—In Gov. George H. Earle's hands today was a drastic new plan for modernizing Pennsylvania's penal program, drafted and submitted by retiring secretary of welfare John D. Pennington.

Com. Pennington, who relinquishes the welfare secretaryship on Wednesday to Arthur W. Howe, Jr., budget secretary, to devote all his time to directing the Pennsylvania Industrial School for Boys at Huntingdon, made these major recommendations:

1. Centralized control of all state-owned penal institutions, with elimination of present trustee boards for "boards of visitors."

2. Coordination of prison and parole services, transferring parole from authority of the attorney general to the department of welfare.

3. Establishment of centralized "classification clinic" in the welfare department to assign convicts to the institution best fitted for their rehabilitation.

4. Establishment of a merit system for all penal and correctional institution employes, with special training for such workers and officers.

Penal institutional employes, Pennington held, should be removed from the "vagaries of political change" because they are entrusted with "dealing with the most intractable elements in our human nature."

Last fall Pennington recommended a "ten year program" for the department, some of which already has been adopted or authorized by legislation.

Council has authorized the city treasurer to refund to Dominic Lombardi, of 202 South First street, $9.20, which he paid in taxes and which was applied on property owned by another Dominic Lombardi of Madison avenue.

EARLE, 'OUT,' PAPER AVERS

Action In Johnstown Doomed Governor, Monitor Says; Dictatorship Feared

BOSTON, June 29.—Gov. George H. Earle, has "conclusively" removed himself from the list of Democratic Presidential candidiates for 1940 "by closing the Bethlehem steel plant at Johnstown." The Christian Science Monitor said ediorially

"For all their love of peace, Americans will be slow to accept the reason given for that action," the editorial said. "They do not relish the abdication of the law before the threat of violence. They do not understand why martial law should be used to stop men from working instead of to protect them in their right to work."

'Worship Of Personality'

Pennsylvania's first Democratic Governor in a half century was accused of favoring a situation which would lead to dictatorship by The Monitor, whose editorial writer said:

"Governor Earle is out—whether for the nomination or from the list of possibilities, according to the way his statement (the statement in which he came out "unqualifiedly "for President Roosevelt for a third term) is interepreted. If his failure at Johnstown has not ruled him out, the very words with which he nominates the President should do so:

"'Between the third term precedent and the welfare of the country, can any patriotic citizen hesitate as to what course he will take?"

"Here speaks the worship of personality, the belief in one man's indispensability which makes for dictatorship."

Another human tragedy was heard in court room No. 1 on Monday morning. A habeas corpus proceeding for the possession of a little two-year-old boy was held in which a father and mother were fighting for possession of the lad.

Mrs. Charlotte Guncy had her husband, Steve Guncy, in on a habeas corpus proceding to get possession of their little son Robert. Her testimony was that on the night of June 5 he had come home drunk, and after an argument had picked up the baby and walked out. He came back a little later and left again, taking the baby with him. Mrs. Guncy said she was able to care for the child and asked possession.

No opinion was handed down by the court on Monday which is usual in such a habeas corpus proceeding. All during the hearing the youngster sat on his father's knee prattling away at the strange sights.

In the office of Prothonotary and Clerk of Courts John A. Edgar two divorce petitions were filed Monday:

Mary Lubitz of New Castle asks a divorce from her husbandfi Carl Lubitz, on the grounds of desertion. They were married March 27, 1914

Josephine Smolinski of New Castle asks a divorce from her husband, John Smolinski, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married January 3, 1926.

Judge James A. Chambers was in Allegheny county on Monday hearing a motion for a new trial in a case he had previously heard. The litigants wanted a new trial and Judge Chambers was forced to go down and hear the arguments.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard was in Blaw-Knox on Monday where he took some of the women recently sentenced by the local court. The Allegheny county workhouse is located at Blaw-Knox, or did you know?

These are the days when candidates are taking out petitions for office and a number have already done so. At least three petitions for judge have been taken out, several for sheriff and one for register and recorder.

You can still fish on a receipt from the county treasurer's office, in fact you can't fish on anything else unless you got a tag while the tags were in. The county ran out weeks ago and the state has not yet sent in a new supply.

Spurned Play Becomes Success

"Excursion" Is Produced With Success By John C. Wilson After Others Turn It Down

GOOD TALKERS ARE FOUND DEAF

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 29.—John C. Wilson not many years ago was one of Wall Street's fashionably attired customer's men. The sort who went to the office decorated with a lapel flower. In the later afternoon he was a popular cocktail party guest, young, handsome and a bachelor.

O. O. McIntyre

His greatest hero was Noel Coward, just then triumphant as the star in his own play, "The Vortex." Wilson so impressed Coward with enthusiasm and admiration for his work that he became the young Englishman's adviser, manager and closest friend.

In Coward's biography there is a full page picture and many references to "Jack." Coward submits all his plays and written articles to him first and makes no production plans without his approval. All of which is a prelude to Wilson appearing in another role.

When Coward's play of short skits closed recently, Wilson decided that between Coward productions he would produce a play called "Excursion." He did, after others had turned it down, and it has proved one of the four major successes of a rather thin theatrical season.

Paul Gerard Smith, one of the west coast's observing litterateurs, finds two of the most interesting conversationalists he knows are extremely hard of hearing. He refers to Idwal Jones, gentle essayist and lovable San Francisco historian, recently roped by the Hollywood studios. In soft voice with gestures arriving just a bit too late, I have been privileged to hear him talk in a gathering of intimate friends, telling the quantest of stores with the deftest touches. The other Smith names is the equally lovable Walt Mason, Emporia, Kansas, poet now living at La Jolla. Oddly, it is not difficult to exchange views with Mason, for somehow, although he can't hear, he knows what one is trying to convey. Then, of course, there is Rupert Hughes, who never fails to dominate discussion at a dinner party because he is chock full of interesting things to say and knows how to say them.

This has been a tremendous era in the emancipation of women, with so many flowering into higher income brackets. Among the playwrights Clare Booth and Lillian Hellman have shown women can write smashing box office hits. Elizabeth Arden and Dorothy Gray have plucked millions out of the cosmetic business and the tea room field has such expert directresses as Theresa Worthington Grant, Alice Foote MacDougal and Elizabeth Reynolds. Three department stores have stylists whose salaries are above $50,000 a year. Strangely, there is one artistic field in which women have made little progress although for many reasons they should. That is in conducting dance orchestras. London has two women who are outstanding and Vienna has several. The Spitalney orchestra is all feminine, but conducted by a man.

The shadow of death hangs heavily over what many believe is New York's most aristocratic block. It is known as Observation Hill and lays serenely on East 93rd street between Park and Madison avenues, filled with massive residences with huge grilled doors and facades grooved in grandeur. Several have brick walled gardens in French fashion and the occupants are the creme de la creme of the social brew. Folk with yachts, Long Island estates, town houses in London and chateaux in France. Among those in the zone passing away recently were George F. Baker and Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt. I have passed through the block many times but have once to see a pedestrian on the sidewalk. Everything is cold, formal and, to the casual passerby, forbidding.

Among Will T. Hay's pictures of celebrities autographed personally to him are those of ex-King Alfonso and Premier Mussolini. No handwritings I have ever seen so markedly portray the popular opinions of the two men. Alfonso's is a weak, vacillating and roundishly cramped schoolboy scrawl that might have been written by a 15-year-old at boarding school. But Il Duce's has vim, dash and sweeps with compellingly bold strokes as though to say "I am master of my Fate." He signs himself merely Mussolini. Recently I was privileged to see a thank-you note from the Duke of Windsor to an American friend. Somehow it had a royal touch, big, commanding. He started it off "Dear Old Fellow" and ended "I hope you are as happy as I—Windsor." Incidentally one of the finest American penmen is former Mayor Jimmy Walker. Experts say his signature is a model of neatness and grace. The best Spencerian flourish I ever saw among editors was that of the late Ray Long.

I rather care for Harry Silvey's reply to a traffic cop who yanked him back from the maelstrom on the avenue the other afternoon as he was about to do a bit of jaywalking. Snarled the cop: "Where do you think you are going?" Silvey gulped and pip-squeaked meekly: "I did know but I've entirely forgotten now."

Clowning In Big Show Is Serious Business

JENNIE ROONEY famous aerialist, and Joey Wenzel, veteran of the clown contingent with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus.

Clowning is a business before it becomes an art, as has been said of acting. In other words, there is a definite technique to be mastered before one can become a funny man under the big top, and this is most manifest in the clown sallies of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus, coming to New Castle Wednesday, July 7, where several European stage drolls have failed to click.

One of the most famous of the Continental clowns, whose name was well known throughout America, was lost in his debut under the great tent of the Big Show, until Joey Wengel, one of the finest American fun makers, took him in hand. This same thing has happened again and again, and the clown, no matter if he has had smaller circus experience, who can race into the big top of The Greatest Show on Earth and score right off, does not exist. The vast Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus arena, with its seven rings and stages, hippodrome track and aerial maze, freezes the newcomer. Nobody sees him. He must be helped by the seasoned funsters, who, to their everlasting credit, have never let down a newcomer yet. They may only give him a dog comic to lead around, but that little act puts him in the picture, gives him confidence until he can learn the ropes. There are 150 clowns with the Big Show this year, and they present 1500 gags, really funny gags in the gigantic performances, which commence at 2 and 8 p. m. with the new super spectacle, "India".

The doors open at 1 and 7 p. m. to permit time in which to view the world's largest traveling menagerie

Two Cars Meet On Narrow Street Argument Ensues

(International News Service)

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 29—When two cars meet in a narrow street, and neither can pass, what is the solution?

When a business woman in her car met a young man in his car coming up an alley in the opposite direction, she "sat tight" and refused to budge. The man did likewise.

Police were called, were puzzled. The young man was finally asked to visit the city building and explain the situation. In the meantime the woman driver swung her machine about, moved it into a driveway and put it in a garage.

Children's Librarian, Miss Alice Joyce Now At Meet In Nova Scotia

Miss Alice M. Sterling, local librarian of the free public library, returned Monday from New York City, where she was a delegate to the annual conference of the American Library association. Miss Alice Joyce, children's librarian of New Castle, who also attended the convention, continued her vacation and is attending a post conference in Nova Scotia.

According to Miss Sterling a record registration was made at the conference, with 5,126 persons attending the various sessions.

Miss Joyce as present at a dinner at which the Newbery prize to the writer of the most distinguished juvenile book of the year was presented to Ruth Sawyer. Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt spoke at this dinner. Miss Sterling attended the reception held preceding the dinner but did not attend the dinner.

Miss Sterling was at a luncheon Wednesday noon, at which Christopher Morley spoke, and Dr. John H. Finley, editor-in-chief of the New York Times was toastmaster.

Many other famous persons spoke at the various sessions of the five-day conference and a great deal of helpful and interesting material was gleaned from the talks, which were so very well presented.

Says Contractors Are "Black-Jacked"

Congressman Charges They Are Being Forced To Buy Democratic Handbook

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Charging that Tennessee federal contractors are being "black jacked" into buying Democratic handbooks at $250 each, Rep. Taylor (R) of Tennessee, in a speech in the House Monday demanded investigation by the department of justice.

The books, Taylor said, were to be autographed by President Roosevelt.

A Col. Kimbrell, said Taylor, called on business men in Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis who had WPA and other government contracts.

After reminding them of what they got from the government, and saying that he was a representative of postmaster general Farley and the president, he sought to take orders from Democratic handbooks at $250 each.

"He told them all that their names were on a list to buy from two to eight, at a total cost of from $500 to $2,000, depending on the amount of business they got from the government."

As a result, she faces trial on assault with attempt to kill and illegally carying a gun.

Mme. De Fontanges shot De-Chambrun, former French ambassador to Rome, as he was about to board a train at the Gare Du Nord.

Minesweeper Is Sunk In Pacific

(International News Service)

SAN PEDRO, Cal., June 29.—The navy's 950-ton minesweeper Sanderling was at the bottom of the mid-Pacific today, according to an announcement by naval officials here.

The officials said the vessel sank while it was being towed from Honolulu to the mainland by the navy tug Cuyama.

There was no loss of life.

No reason for the sinking was given at naval headquarters, but it was indicated a board of inquiry probably will be called. The Sandlerling was built in 1915.

COOKING SPINACH

In cooking spinach, as little water as possible should be used and the pot kept tightly covered. If the spinach has just been washed, there usually is enough water clinging to the leaves so that none need be added.

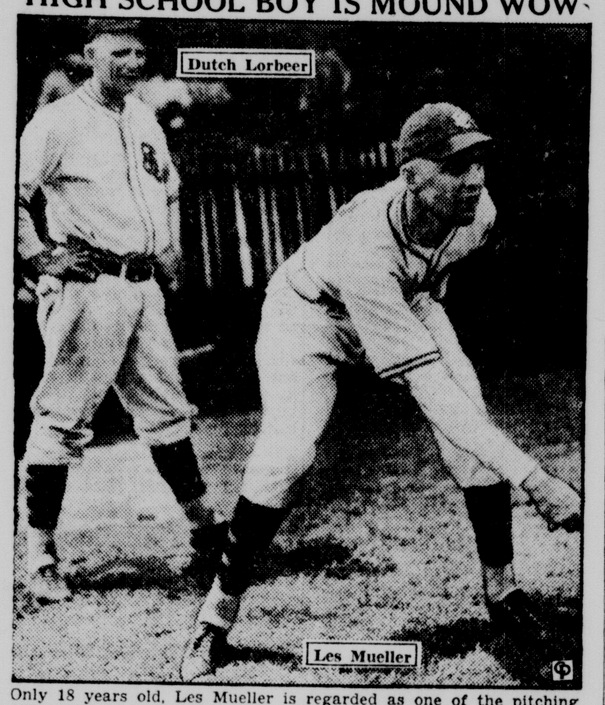
HIGH SCHOOL BOY IS MOUND WOW



Only 18 years old, Les Mueller is regarded as one of the pitching discoveries of the season. The youngster, whose home is Belleville, Ill., has been captured by the Tigers and farmed to Sioux City in the Western league. In seven high school games he averaged 18 strikeouts per game, has hurled two no-hit shutouts and in a 12-inning game fanned 30 men. Les is being taught a few baseball tricks by Ernest (Dutch) Lorbeer, former manager of the Beaumont Texas league club and the man who developed Catcher George Tebbetts and Pitchers Gill, Poffenberger and Coffman, who are with the Tigers this year.

Shellogg Brothers Hollywood Firemen

"Red" Grange started the college football players to carrying ice in the summer time to get lots of "muscle", and the Shellogg brothers of New Castle, Pa., have started a new fad for summer employment of grid huskies.

Believe it or not but they are members of the fire department of the M-G-M studio in Hollywood, California, (no they are not in the movies), each studio has its own fire department, and that is where the former New Castle high stars and Notre Dame stars come in.

Try For Regular Berths

Both Alec and Fred have very good chances of making the varsity at Notre Dame this year and to play regularly. It will be the first brother act at Notre Dame in many many years. They are keeping in trim out on the coast working, and training, also doing a lot of swimming and muscle building.

The job was secured through the mediations of Charles Butterworth and a big Notre Dame alumnus.

Richard Shellogg, a brother, in talking with The News sports writer today said that Notre Dame is going to have the heaviest line in the history of the school. Shellogg also revealed that the backfield this year at the South Bend school will be the lightest in the past several years and will be known as the "Pony Express". The line will average over 200 pounds from end to end. The backfield will average anywhere between 150 and 160.

Great Prospects

Charles Linden of the South Bend News is a great friend of the Shellogg boys and predicts great things for the New Castle young men before they are through at Notre Dame.

It is possible that the Shellogg boys will be back in New Castle for a week or two before school resumes at Notre Dame, where both boys will be juniors this year.

In the meantime its (fireman save my child, business with the boys and their many friends here wish them luck and success. (Imagine being able to rescue Carol Lombard or Ginger Rogers) some people have all the luck.

National League Race Is Close

Pittsburgh In Fourth Place Is Only Three And Half Games Out Of Lead

CHICAGO CUBS ARE ON TOP

By LAWTON CARVER
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 29.—Although they won only five games out of 11 on the road trip through the west which ended Sunday, the Giants returned home today in position to regain the league lead promptly—and with the schedule favoring their ascendancy.

The National League champions were in the lead when they departed from the Polo Grounds and, despite their poor record out through the midlands, returned here only three percentage points behind the second place St. Louis Cardinals, who in turn are only a half game behind the leading Chicago Cubs.

Race Is Tight

Thus the Giant's plight isn't so bad from a standpoint of the standings, and really looks quite all right considering that they open a series with the Philadelphia Phillies today and then move out against the Boston Bees. Both clubs figure to be virtual setups. Meanwhile, the Cubs and Cardinals will be bent upon knocking each other off, then will be confronted by the Pittsburgh Pirates, who still are tough.

In fact, the Pirates, down in fourth place, are only 3½ games out of the National League lead, and may get going again at any time, although they seemingly have just enough to make it tough for the rest and not enough to come through on top.

This sum covered $15,000 he had been advanced by the Garden, plus $972.16 interest and $176.07 for unpaid tickets.

TALES IN TIDBITS

By BILI BRAUCHER
Central Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 29—The job a catcher does often is overlooked. Pitchers get credit for the shutouts. You never see "Dickey catches no-hit game" in the headlines. You hardly ever see a pennant winner, however, without a great catcher. In the last few years the Giants, with Mancuso; Tigers with Cochrane; Yankees with Dickey, and Cubs with Hartnett have been blessed with success.

That's why I think the Cleveland Indians are going to be hard to stop this year. Frankie Pytlak, the diminutive Buffalo Pole, is turning out to be the nuts as a maskman. He has been threatening for four years to become a top-line catcher, and this appears to be the year. Last year when the Indians were going at their best he was laid out with a broken jaw after sticking his chin into one of Monte Pearson's curves. It will be remembered the Tribe promptly swooned.

This year he has been catching double-headers, at his own expressed wish, and catchers who ask for double duty must be regarded in the light of young men with ambition. Frankie has been hitting in runs, stealing bases, throwing runners out with rifle pegs and otherwise conducting himself like Buck Ewing. If the Indians can keep their five-foot-seven wizard propped up behind that old dish, the Clevelanders are going to grab that flag this year.

Despite what the typewriter jockeys in the Cleveland press box are saying, the Indians have changed a whole lot for the better under Manager Steve O'Neill by reason of the aggressive, slashing type of game they're playing. O'Neill's strategy (he's a great hunch player) does not always percolate properly, and when it doesn't the second-guessers in the observation coop bray plenty, but the fact is the Indians have got every team in the league wondering what's coming off next. The Tribe doesn't play stereotyped percentage baseball, frequently breaking the union rules and catching the enemy flatfooted to the great glee of the paying customers.

The art of making your opponent jittery is a great element in baseball success. Ball clubs that meet the Yankees are awed by the New Yorkers' prestige at the plate. The Indians are keeping their foes confused with daring tactics. Such baseball looks bad when it fails, but despite a bunch of misplays, the Indians are still right up there. The mental attitude of the team has changed, helped a whole lot, no doubt, by the aggressive thinking of some of its new hands such as Whitehill, Lary and Solters.

But this rambling brochure started to say a few well chosen words about Pytlak. Boss O'Neill has brought Frankie along with all the care a florist lavishes on a greenhouse bloom. Steve was manager at Toledo when he got Frankie, and the former great catcher of the Indians has been the guy's governess ever since. Pytlak joined the Indians when he was 23. He was very rookish, absolutely without a wile in him, and was made the butt of every brand of practical joke the ball players indulged. But he developed into one of the best clutch hitters in the league, and repeatedly has proved his value as a bunter when there is a chance for a squeeze.

NEW YORK, June 29—Gossip in the press boxes is to the effect Dizzy Dean will be sold to the Giants after the present season . . . for $75,000 and a couple of ball players Branch Rickey wants . . . Leroy Parmelee credits on operation for his success this year, and his lack of arm trouble and wildness . . . it seems a couple of muscles in his shoulder had grown together back in the days when he was at Toledo, in 1929, and bothered him all these years . . . Doc Neil separated the muscles, and now Leroy is pitching grand ball. . . . Paul Dean may return to the wars again this year . . . he has been pitching overhand and reports no bad effects, but is taking his time because he wants to be sure . . . if he comes back okay, the Cardinals look like the winners.

Joe Cronin of the Red Sox told New York interviewers he "certainly was sorry to see Rick Ferrell leave" (in the deal with Washington) . . . praising Rick as a fine catcher, great competitor, smart chap with great team spirit . . . and added that it was odd how different Rick was from his brother Wes! . . . Lefty Gomez' Scottie dog, which the Yankee pitcher believes brings him luck, has recovered from the mess of hamburgers Pat Malone bought the beast. . . . Brooklyn has beaten Carl Hubbel 23 times in 39 starts. . . . Word from Hollywood: Lou Gehrig will be a strong, silent two-gun guy in a picture called "Boots and Saddles" to be filmed during the winter.

The National league is becoming pediculous with portsiders, very club in the loop having one or more starting southpaws . . . the Reds have a couple of aces in Lee Grissom and Johnny Vandermeer, and also have Bill Hallahan and Al Hollingsworth who throw that way. Carl Hubbel, Cliff Melton and Al Smith are the Giants' curvers . . . the Cubs have Larry French and Dusty Shoun . . . ace of the Pirates' corps is Ed Brandt . . . the Phils have been troubling everybody with Wayne Lamaster . . . the Bees have Bill Weir . . . the Dodgers, Roy Henshaw and Ralph Birkofer . . . the Cards have no starting southpaw, but Dizzy Dean thinks lefthanded, and that's something.

About the only explanation for the way those Tigers have been going is that they're battling for Mick . . . broken bones don't seem to bother them . . . first Owen, then Hayworth suffered arm fractures . . . Del Baker had to leave the team in charge of Cy Perkins . . . Old Cy has been running the club like a McGraw . . . this new pitcher, Cletus Poffenberger, is a big help to the Bengals.

Oe of the season's oddities is the success of Lefty Lee of the White Sox against the Yankees . . . he has beaten them three times, but can't get anybody else out. . . . Those Pirates will be back up there again before July Fourth.

Some Upswing In Market Trading

Quiet And Narrow Trading Range Develops In Stock Market

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 29—After rapid reversal of an opening decline, the stock market settled into a quiet and narrow trading range today.

Initial losses running to a point, result of the French monetary crisis, were converted into equal-sized gains with sentiment aided by continued grain market strength and accelerated pace of the back-to-work movement of steel workers.

Steels, rubbers, rails, motors, coppers and aviation shares were in the van of the upswing but virtually all sections of the list were encompassed by the upward surge.

Bonds were lower, however, with governments continuing weak. In grains, many cereals were up the limit of five cents. Cotton lost some ground.

Camp East Brook Season Is Begun

Fifty-Eight Young Campers Arrive On Monday Afternoon For Stay

Fifty-eight little girls, all very happy and eager, converged on Camp East Brook of the Y. W. C. A. Monday afternoon and drove right into a program that will keep them busy for 12 days.

Their director, Miss Helen Cooper, and the camp staff took charge of them. Games, swimming tests, assignments to classes, supper, more games, an outdoor campfire, crackers and milk and so to bed—thus did the 1937 camp season get underway.

This morning, after their camp duties were over, the young army of girls trekked to the "cliff" where morning worship was conducted. The rest of the forenoon was passed in swimming, handcraft, nature study, dramatics and music classes. Lunch at noon, rest hour, a dip and supper will be in order this afternoon, then another campfire.

The girls have been apportioned off to "bunks" and last evening they had fun naming them, and giving their counselors appropriate nicknames. The names and nicknames of the counselors and names of the bunks follow: Helen Cooper, "Cappy," The Pines; Matilda Sobesky, "Nursey," The Evergreens; Louise Davies, "Titania," Kentucky Coffeeberries; Peggy Griffiths, "Puck," The Sunny Poplars; Mabel Grubb, "Tinkerbell," The Graceful Elms; Doris Marvin, "Pan," Snappy Sycamores; Katie Cooper, "Robin," Weeping Birches.

Miss Griffiths' Sunny Poplars cabin received the honor sign for neatness today. In the cabin are Janet Carroll, Anne Davidson, Janice Evans, Sondra Lee Hamilton, Marjorie Calbfleisch, Doris Peterson and Peggy Skinner.

Plans To Carry Mail Probe To Senate Floor

Senator Bridges Harangues Action Of Committee In Not Calling Postmaster Farley

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29—Charging the senate post office committee's refusal to question Postmaster General Farley regarding alleged interference with the mails by strikers in the steel strike areas "a disgraceful performance," Senator Bridges (R) of New Hampshire, said today he will carry the issue to the floor of the senate.

While he struck out against Farley another cabinet member—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins—was attacked in a speech in the house by Rep. Cox (D) of Georgia. He assailed her suggestion to Governor Davey, of Ohio, to use the state's power of subpoena to bring all the parties concerned in steel strike together.

Suspend Inquiry

The committee voted 12 to 3 to suspend the inquiry. Bridges said he will publicly question Farley from the floor of the senate within a few days. He outlined the inquiry as follows:

"I want to inquire, among other things, whether the fact that Mr. John L. Lewis, through the United Mine Workers, an affiliate of the C.I.O., contributed between four and five hundred thousand dollars to the last Democratic campaign had anything to do with his order that food and clothing could not be sent through the mails to workers in the plants.

"I do not mean to imply that his order was in these identical terms. The facts are a little different, but it is an interesting coincidence that irregular and unusual mail, so-called, which was barred from acceptance and delivery by the post office department, was the type of mail which was objected to by the C.I.O."

Jamboree Will Start Tomorrow

Thousands Of Additional Scouts Arrive At Washington, D. C.

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 29.—With arrivals from distant points pouring in hourly, the banks of the Potomac river hummed with activity today as thousands of boy scouts labored to have all in readiness for tomorrow's official opening of the first National Jamboree of American boy scouts.

The last detachment of scouts is due in tonight from Santa Rosa, Cal. With their arrival, the sweeping tent city stretched along the river will contain its capacity population of 25,000 youths.

First on the program of official events will be an impressive flag raising ceremony early tomorrow. At eight in the evening the first camp fire, a huge blaze calculated to transform the Washington monument into a glowing shaft, will be lighted.

Thursday the jamboree will swing into high, with numerous arena displays scheduled.

Today's arrivals include delegations from the west coast, New England, the far south and midwest, with the largest group—2,460—coming from New England.

Issue Warrants For Three Others In Warren Bombing

Three Are Under Arrest And Held Under Bond Of $25,000

(International News Service)

WARREN, O., June 29.—Warrants were issued today for the arrest of three other men implicated, according to police, by one of three previously arrested as suspects in the series of bombings which terrified this strike-ridden district.

Those sought were identified as Gus Hall, a CIO strike leader; Joe Drawitz and Charles Byers, CIO members.

Under arrest and held under $25,000 bond were Arthur Scott, John Borawiecz and George Bunders, also CIO members.

Police said Scott made a statement in the presence of Night Chief of Police Barney J. Gillen, and Ohio National Guard officers implicating the other three men.

According to a statement issued by George W. Buchwalter, Warren city solicitor, Scott told police that on instructions from Hall, Byers, Bunders and Borawiecz tossed two bottles of nitro-glycerine on the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad near the open hearth furnaces of Republic Steel here. One exploded but the other was recovered by police.

Knight steered his car to the center of East Washington street to turn left into Allen street. He was headed west. Baxter was driving east and claims a man was crossing the street and he had to drive to the left of Knight's car.

After the collision Baxter's car ran upon the sidewalk, according to the report made to police.

Inspiring Service At Lawrence Mission

An inspiring service was conducted Sunday in Lawrence Mission, located at 123 Lawrence street, and the message was brought by Rev. Harry L. Johnston, pastor of the Simpson M. E. church.

Mrs. Mary Ellis, well known evangelist from Philadelphia, was a guest of the occasion and favored the audience with several vocal and piano selections. Mr. Bradley was also a guest soloist.

There was a large crowd in attendance and after the sermon five came forward to accept the Lord.

Two Accused Of Resisting Officer

Arrests Made On Ray Street About 2 O'clock This Morning

Chris Miller, of Slippery Rock, has an injured head; and with Clair Wagner, of Butler, R. D. 6, was scheduled to appear before Mayor Charles E. McGrath on charges of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and resisting Plainclothesman Charles Shepp at 2 a. m. today in Ray street. The officer used the butt of his revolver to subdue Miller, after the two were alleged to have wrested Shepp's blackjack from him while making the arrests. Miller was treated at Jameson Memorial hospital.

According to police reports, Miller and Wagner were with two girls, both from out-of-town. Wagner did not know the road and Miller wanted to drive the car, the report stated.

The men got out of the car near the dinkey track and started to fight, it is reported. The girls screamed. Shepp came along, showed his authority, and placed the men under arrest.

They are said to have fought him, and in the struggle, they got his blackjack. He pulled his revolver, shot once into the air to summon aid, then rapped Miller on the head with the butt of his revolver.

Other police arrived quickly. Miller was taken to the hospital, where he spent the early hours of the morning. Wagner was fined $25.00 in police court today. Miller was still in the Jameson Memorial hospital this morning and has not received a trial yet.

There seems to be general agreement about this industrial fight. One group thinks it revolution and the other thinks it revolting.
